Hello there. You don't know who I am and I ask that we keep it that way. I was told by a mutual acquaintance that you are interested in hacking. I normally don't do this, but I thought I could offer up some advice and hopefully if you have enough potential we could work together. First thing you need to do though is head over to the hacker bbs. In case you don't know, a bbs stands for bulletin board system. It is a place where people can connect anonymously over their computers to share information and files. To connect to the bbs type "connect bbs.hacker.net" and then complete a new job from the job board. Once you are finished doing that I will contact you again. Also don't forget that using admin should work as the username and password for unsecured computers and make sure you purchase a tracespy as soon as you can.

It's hard to explain why this game is so seductive for me. Probably that is because it reminds me of the era when we had no decent games and the computer itself was a toy.

It takes about 6 hours to complete the main story, which contains more than just hacking and stealing data, so quite exciting and nostalgic. Ah, since explaining what are nostalgic leads to spoilers, I can't talk a lot about this. Plus, the game has procedural missions that I get a craving for playing sometimes when getting tired of games full of sound and visual effects.

The in-game operating system has command history for only 4 lines and no function of search path. Of course, this means you need to move the current directory before executing program files in the folder. (Wow!) Therefore, I recommend this game only for keyboard addicts or who are planning to be so.

However, all files in the virtual computer are duplicated correctly under your game folder. In other words, you can open emails and documents with your favorite text editor instead of reading them on the console. This is a fairly rare feature that I wish many other games to copy.

When interacting with the computer in a world without sound or color (although the game reproduces the really nostalgic and hard-to-see blur of composite video) and my thoughts go to a man whose life is ruined by my hacking, I feel I understand why hackers of old compare computing to Zen. Yap, I overstated a bit.
